HW:

Odds and ends: Thanks for your tip on the office supply situaton. We do have trouble, especially in finding file folders heavy enough to hold irregular batches of clippings. Nearly all stores have only flimsy manila folders, but for a while we did have a source for heavy kraft folders made by Remington-Rand. That source now, however, appears reluctant to order further for us. One of our neighbors runs a stationery store in the SF biz district, and your note encourages me to consult him both on folders and typing paper, and also on second sheets and carbon sets, all problems.

We'll pass the Epstein article in Commentary, thanks. It seems marginal.

Thanks also for the copy of the SLA code message in an underground paper, with which we get absolutely nowhere. The code appears to be intricately scrambled. Assume Freed said nothing about in which underground paper this appeared, or the date.
